

THE MORNING APPEAL.

TUESDAY JANUARY 28

THE RIGHTS OF NEWSPAPERS

For some weeks past the APPEAL has been fighting the County of Ormsby to recover the paltry sum of $54 and some odd cents for printing the county tax roll, the price of which, as fixed by the law of the State, shall not exceed 20 cents a name. The APPEAL charged the limit allowed by law, but Messrs. Bray and Woodbury, after putting their heads together over the bill, concluded that it was too much to allow a newspaper and cut it down to 13 cents a name, under the notion that the Legislature in fixing the rate did not know what it was doing.

Why Messrs. Bray and Woodbury should pit their brains against the combined wisdom of the Legislature is not a matter for discussion here, nor do we know at the present time what the outcome of the suit will be, as Judge Mack has taken the case under advisement and as yet no decision has been reached.

The law of this State has placed a rate upon every piece of work required by law to be done by a newspaper. It has placed a limit upon everything that the printer does, and the sign blazoned by the law over his work is, "So far shalt thou go and no farther."

But the law places such limits upon the professional services of no other calling. A physician who sets the broken leg of a rich man can charge $5,000 and the law helps him to collect it. A lawyer settles up a $10,000 estate and pockets $9,000, and the Court says it is alright, but if a newspaper charges $50 for a tax sale or administrator's sale in the same case the bill is scrutinized and generally cut down about one half, while some side remark is made by the attorney that "these d— newspapers want the earth."

A politician who steals a speech from some other State and yells it a few times at an audience of hobos is loaded with public honors and allowed to live the balance of his life drawing a fat salary and doing nothing, but the newspaper publisher who is defending the interests of his State over 300 days in the year is treated like a petty larceny thief every time he presents a bill for any service required by law.

A lot of pin-headed legislators who get in office every two years by reason of the exertions of newspapers, put in half the session passing bills regulating the charges of newspapers until the newspapers in this State have very nearly struck a starvation basis, and for every dollar they legally earn they have to spend 50 per cent in court fees and litigation getting it.

The APPEAL has been obliged six times to resort to litigation in order to collect legal rates for advertising. It has won every suit so far, except the present one, which is undecided.

These suits are backed by the Nevada Newspaper Association and we are ready to keep on fighting them as long as the other side are willing to pay costs and employ lawyers.

The present newspaper laws seem to be in some way ambiguous to public officers, and the newspaper men of Nevada, will at the next session of the Legislature present a general newspaper law fixing rates on all kinds of advertising and printing required by law; and furthermore, the political party neglecting to pledge itself to fair play to the press need not expect the friendship or support of Nevada newspapers in the future.

The press of this State has been humbugged on this proposition long enough and is now fully organized and equipped for a fight to protect its interests.

There is grief in the Royal household of England because Prince Henry of Battenburg died from a fever contracted in leading a pillaging expedition into Ashantee. Had the Queen had a decent respect for the rights of the natives of Ashantee her favorite son-in-law would be alive now. English greed is responsible for his death.

The body of Prince Henry lieth in funeral state, And stricken Princess Beatrice laments her royal mate, While prone on Afric's bloody sands beneath the blasted cane, Lies the Ashantee warriors by British bullets slain, And on that devastated field a frenzied girl is seen, Who kneels beside her lover's grave and curses England's Queen.

The Duchess of Marlborough has insured her life for $3,000,000 in favor of her husband. The Duke seems bent on squeezing all the cash he can out of the Vanderbilts. Her family in New York are very much disgusted and think she has lost her head.
